

DEATH IN A BLAST

Luna John Soetes' Head
Blown Off.

LATEST NEWS OF HAWAII

Hoolulu Park Beautified and Prepared for Race Meet on New Year's Day.

HILLO, Hawaii, Nov. 22.—The Herald says: One of the large undertakings of the Olan Sugar Company is the construction of the flume from Kaumana to Olan. In the work a number of men are employed and much blasting is done in order to obtain holding ground for the flume framework.

John Soetes, a luna under Mr. Hanneberg, had charge of the blasting. On Tuesday the work was progressing satisfactorily until it became necessary to "spread" a piece of lava. The usual quantity of powder with fuse and cap was inserted, but the charge failed to explode. Hanneberg and Soetes walked to the place and the latter withdrew the fuse and inserted a new piece and together the men walked away, both, however, looking back to see if there was any sign of the fuse burning. When twenty feet away Soetes remarked that the thing would not burn and both stopped for a moment. Soetes then went over to the blast and just as he stepped over the explosion took place. Hanneberg threw himself on the ground and Soetes shot up into the air, his body turning like a cart wheel. When Hanneberg recovered from the shock he ran to where Soetes had fallen and found that one-half of his head and one arm had been blown off.

Word was sent to town at once and Dr. Reid went out and made an examination of the body, the result of which was reported to the sheriff. Deceased was formerly a boatswain on the bark Irmgard. He came from Antwerp and was about 23 years of age. He was a sober and industrious man and a valuable assistant to Mr. Hanneberg.

The remains were brought to Hilo Tuesday night and taken to Lockington's undertaking rooms, from which place they were buried yesterday morning.

FOUND GUILTY.

A young man who manages a plantation in Kona was recently complained against for having a vicious dog. He consulted Attorney Maydwell by phone and requested him to settle the case. Maydwell wired back that he had better come over to Kailua and attend to it himself, as his presence was needed. The young man had scarcely stepped from the trolley when he was arrested on a warrant and taken to an improvised court room for a hearing. One young chap appeared as prosecuting officer and the plantation manager sought some one in the crowd to defend him, as Maydwell was the judge. As the case proceeded the attorneys got into a wrangle, which brought a stern rebuke from the judge, and it was some time before order was restored. Several times the defendant expressed a willingness to plead guilty to anything, but was restrained by his attorney. When the case closed the judge found him guilty and sentenced him to pay a fine of $21 in beer. Until the final word was pronounced the young man was not aware that he was the victim of a joke.

TRACK IMPROVEMENTS.

Hoolulu Park is a much changed place since the last races were held there. The center plot, which is to be used as a ball ground, has been planted in manille and buffalo grass and in a short time will be a beautiful lawn. The space between the grand stand and the entrance to the track and a circular plot in the saddle pad-dock have also been planted in grass. At the entrance to the park the company has built a comfortable dwelling for the watchman and erected a gate for the purpose of keeping out persons who have no right in the grounds. It is the intention of the company to charge an entrance fee of 25 cents for all licensed single horse vehicles and 50 cents for all two-horse carriages that pass through the gate. Private carriages and heavy teams belonging to the Volcano Stables Co. will be admitted free. Acting Manager E. E. Wilson in speaking of this said: "The company has gone to great expense to provide a place for racing and athletic sports. We have built a good road and the expense of keeping it in repair is considerable. While outside teams use the road when they wish, they contribute nothing toward the upkeep and for that reason we have decided to make a charge for its use by teams not connected with our company."

Besides planting the grass where stated Mr. Wilson is having a trench dug from the entrance of the park to grand stand and in this he will plant a hedge. There are a number of horses promised for the events of January 1st some of them top-notchers. Trainer McManus has six horses in his charge on the track.

MUSICALE AT MOANAIKI.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. McStocker entertained a number of friends at a musicale at their handsome residence at Olan plantation on Tuesday evening of last week in honor of William H. Hoopes of Honolulu, who was visiting them. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Horan, Dr. and Mrs. Blake, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Clay, Mr. and Mrs. Fuller, Miss Pearl Hosack and Messrs. Scott, Dettelle, Hadden and Whitcomb. Mrs. Curtis recited several well known selections in her finished style and Mrs. Blake rendered a piano solo. Miss Hosack and Mr. Hoopes sang a duet from "Il Trovatore" and afterwards in response to a request Miss Hosack sang "Oh, Promise Me," from Robin Hood. The young lady was in excellent voice and surprised even those who had heard her on other occasions. Mr. Hoopes, who some years ago was a professional singer who visits Honolulu, Mr. McStocker surprised his guests by making his debut as a vocalist.

TO SERVE IN HONOLULU.

In accordance with a recent order by the prison inspectors all long term prisoners are to serve out their sentences at the Oahu penitentiary. The last Kinnu took down twenty-five of these men who will in future, until their terms expire, work on the Honolulu streets. Several of the Hawaiian prisoners shed bitter tears on leaving Hilo.

J. T. Moir and J. S. Canario returned yesterday after a ten days' visit to Honolulu.

J. A. Gilman, executor of the estate of Robert More, deceased, was a passenger on the Kinnu.

One of the Chinamen charged with mutilating a man in Hana, some months ago is feigning insanity in the Hilo jail.

Charles Keanohou, a retired policeman, died at his home in Puna on Monday. He had been ill for more than a year.

L. E. Ray, who went to Honolulu last week to engineer a big deal, returned yesterday highly pleased with the result.

Contractor H. Kendal, who has been visiting relatives in Maine during the past six months, returned to Hilo yesterday.

Frank Gertz met with an accident on the beach last Sunday which resulted in his breaking his right arm at the wrist.

Inspector Robinson of the postoffice department is in town.

The old Mountain View hotel has been torn down owing to decay. A new building for the Olan plantation will be erected in its place.

J. M. Cameron has been awarded the contract for the plumbing work on Manager Campbell's house at Puna.

J. Castle Ridgeway, treasurer of the Kohala-Hilo Railroad Co., was to leave New York for Hilo shortly after the election with funds necessary to build the line. He is expected here at any time.

PLAGUE SPOT IS CONDEMNED NOW

Block Unfit For Habitation
Must Be Filled In To Grace.

Superintendent of Public Works McCandless asked the Board of Health yesterday to condemn as unfit for building purposes the lot bounded by Beretania, Nuuanu, Kukui and River streets. He said that this had been a nest of bubonic plague, and in bad weather now was covered with water. He was receiving applications for building permits, and he wanted the board to take action so as to prevent any building until the land had been filled into the street grade.

He said that the Board of Health recognized the need of this and was filling in its part. Mr. McCandless said that the place had been an old banana patch, and he did not believe that it could be drained to the sewer in its present condition. The board condemned the lot as desired.

WAILUKU'S SORE NEED.

A Handy Man With a Hearse Is Badly Wanted There.

Wanted—A cabinet maker and upholsterer. A practical man who can both make and mend furniture will find all he can do in Wailuku. A shop of this kind, with a stock of coffins and undertaker's supplies, and decent hearse, is badly needed.

At present the only apology for anything of this kind is run by an enterprising Chinaman, and the average white man is very dead indeed who does not feel some compunctions at being driven to his last resting place by a Chinaman.—Maui News.

Haywood Is Back.

William Haywood, Collector of Internal Revenue, and who is to be the representative of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association at Washington, returned to Honolulu from San Francisco on the transport Sheridan. Mr. Haywood said that while in San Francisco he concluded arrangements by which Burt Thomas, the Treasury Department agent, would come here to take charge of the affairs of the office of internal revenue, which is now in charge of W. F. C. Hansen. Upon Mr. Thomas' arrival, the formal transfer of the office will be made to him by Mr. Haywood. Mr. Hansen will then be put in charge until a collector is appointed from Washington. Agent Thomas will arrive here tomorrow on the China. Mr. Haywood expects to leave for the coast by the next Zealandia with his family and will go straight to Washington from San Francisco.

Handsome Funeral Car.

A handsome funeral car is almost completed in the shops of the Oahu Railway and Land Company and will, when finished, be a work of art and utility. The car is being constructed from designs made by J. A. Hughes, the master car builder. The compartment for the corpse takes up one-third of the length of the car. The walls of this compartment are upholstered in black cloth with gold trimmings. A tier will stand in the middle, upholstered appropriately. Situated at the other end of the car are reversible seats for the accommodation of thirty passengers.

MAUI AND THE KONA

Extent of Damage Done
By the Storm.

LOSS IS CONSIDERABLE

Iao Valley Suffers Greatly--Roads are Washed Out--What the News Says.

WAILUKU, Maui, Nov. 24.—The News says: At the time of going to press last Saturday morning very little was known of the actual damage done by the Kona storm and it was Tuesday before full reports reached Wailuku.

A great deal of damage was done in Iao valley, principally on Thursday night and Friday morning. The flood of water which came down began its work of destruction at the head of the pipe system of the water works. Last week's News reports as to the damage are confirmed but the damage was greater than was then stated. From the first crossing up nearly to the second the river overflowed its bed and changed its channel, flowing directly down the pipe line. The pipe was uncovered, and as it was in the bed of the new stream, huge boulders were carried down, crushing the pipe into fragments. The road was also washed out, so that it is now difficult to go up the valley on horseback, even. Above the second crossing the pipe was also washed out and crushed by boulders. Practically, the pipe system above the first crossing is a total wreck, beyond all hope of repair.

Below the first crossing and at the point where the Iao valley begins to widen out the huge volume of water overflowed the banks of the stream and cut numerous new channels, washing out the taro patches, rice fields and cottages that were in its path. At a point some distance above the tunnel being run by Mr. Waldeyer for the Wailuku Sugar Co., the whole river left its old bed at a bend in the stream, on the Wailue side, and cut a new bed through the cane and taro patches, forming quite an island. A dam is being put across the new stream at its point of deviation, with a view of forcing it back into the old channel. Fortunately, but little damage was done to the tunnel, the new stream having paralleled it down to the cut, where the new stream entered the cut, washing out the flumes and finally filling it up with gravel.

Just above the bridge across the river on Market street the water sought a new channel on the Wailue side running under the fish market and adjacent buildings and doing some injury to the road. Another heavy storm following on the heels of the present one would permanently change the course of the stream and leave the present bridge high and dry.

DAMAGE AT LAHAINA.

The storm raged with great severity at Lahaina. The Ranger, the vessel reported by the mail carrier last week as being in great danger, drifted to within twenty-five feet of the reef. She had but one anchor and two bowlines made fast to the buoy and was barely able to hold.

Between 75 and 100 grown trees were blown down in the town, fortunately doing no further damage. A heavy wash came down from the hills, destroying some cane on the Pioneer plantation. The worst damage done was the filling up the pit of the Lahaina pump, a new Worthington. A part of the rock wall around the pit was toppled over, falling on the pump and doing it considerable injury. The mud and rocks were dug out and the injured portions of the machinery were taken out and shipped to Honolulu for repairs.

The Olawalu plantation suffered severely from the wash from the hills, several tracts of young cane being completely buried out of sight.

THE ROADS.

Mr. F. Kohler, bookkeeper at the Pioneer plantation, Lahaina, accompanied by Captain Saxe of the Euterpe, came over from Lahaina to Wailuku last Monday on horseback, being five hours on the road. They report that from Lahaina to Olawalu there is but little damage done to the road. From Olawalu to the foot of the pali, however, they report the road to be in a very damaged condition. In a number of places for fifty yards it is full of big boulders. In other places huge wash-outs are cut through the road.

Across the pali much damage has been done. In many places vast heaps of mud have been piled up in the road. A number of the rock walls on the lower side of the road have broken loose, opening lateral raps several inches wide for their entire length, the crevices being too deep to see the bottom of them.

From Maunaloa Bay to Wailuku there are a number of deep washouts across the road. Mr. Kohler states that it will take from six weeks to two months to repair the road and that it will cost several thousand dollars.

From Thursday of last week until Tuesday of this week the road from Makawao to Kahului was impassable on account of the mud deposits in the low places. Wailuku, which gets its milk supply from Makawao, had to take its coffee and tea "straight" from last Thursday till Tuesday of this week.

THE PLANTATIONS.

The destruction of cane and cane lands on the plantations is not nearly so much as at first thought. On many of the plantations some of the cane was overthrown and carried with debris and some of the ripe cane was broken off, but the loss in this direction will not make any perceptible reduction in dividends.

Manager Lewis of the Hawaiian Commercial reports that the loss of cane on that plantation is comparatively slight. The principal damage was done to the old ditch which was filled with gravel by the wash from above. The new ditch was but little injured, only two flumes having washed out.

Olawalu suffered more than any of the other plantations in the relative amount of cane actually destroyed. The Kihel cane was not injured at all, but was immensely benefited by the rain. Pala plantation and those lying east of it, around to Kipahulu, were not injured, as they were on the lee side of Maunaloa from the brunt of the storm.

Outside of Iao valley but little harm was done to the Wailuku plantation cane, except at Wailuku. An immense amount of flume has been washed away, however, and will have to be replaced before the next sugar making season begins.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Mr. Carl Waldeyer, superintendent of construction of the tunnel in Iao valley, had a close call. He was stopping at the old Lame residence in the Iao valley. This residence is below the lower end of the tunnel and directly in the path of the new stream. About 2 o'clock on Friday morning the water began to rise rapidly and soon filled the lower part of the building. He attempted to escape from the rear of the building, but the water drove him back. He immediately telephoned to friends in Wailuku to come to his rescue. A party headed by Dr. Boote and Mr. Field was at once organized, and proceeded to his relief. In the meantime, the water had risen so much that debris and logs were washing in at the lower windows and threatening to demolish the house. Mr. Waldeyer started across the stream on a chain high ground, catching at the trees to prevent being carried too fast. Finally he reached a point opposite where several natives stood on the opposite bank of the stream with a lantern. They waded partly across the stream, then turned and then formed a chain, their hands, enabling one of them to reach out near the middle of the stream. Mr. Waldeyer approached as near as possible, and making a spring, succeeded in grasping the outstretched hand of a native, and was safely waded across to shallow water. He waded out and started for Wailuku, meeting his anxious friends half way to town.

MAKAWAO.

The storm has done much damage to the Kula corn crop. A month ago the prospects were that an enormous crop of corn would be raised and that corn would be cheap. Some damage was done to the crop by rains early in October, but much was still left. The Kona, however, has almost destroyed the Kula corn crop. Corn on the lower lands was already ripe, and on the higher land was ripening. Much of the corn was washed completely out of the ground, and carried away by the rush of water. In other places it was simply prostrated and covered with mud and gravel.

A large number of eucalyptus trees were blown down in Makawao. The potato crop is also damaged by the storm. The blight, which is pronounced by some observant residents of Makawao as simply a mildew caused by too much moisture, still continues its ravages. Makawao is also afflicted with another pest—the red ant. The ground is simply honeycombed by them. Mr. E. H. Bailey, of Makawao, states that he noticed that one of his young peach trees had fallen, and upon examination he found that the reason was that the ants had so honeycombed the trunk that it had rotted and the roots had no support.

STORM NOTES.

While a crew of the Kahului Railroad hands were repairing the track the other day, after the big storm, in digging into the sand near the track, they unearthed forty-four tins of opium. Visions of unlimited wealth began to dance before their eyes, and on further examination it was found that the opium had been buried so long that the cans had rusted and their contents were entirely spoiled. There is no clue as to how long or by whom the opium was cached.

The winds in Wailuku played havoc with the magnificent hedge of cedars in front of Judge Kalua's residence, some of them being blown down entirely and others partially uprooted. It was too bad, as this was by far the handsomest hedge in town, and always attracted the admiring eyes of visitors.

Over 100 telephone poles were blown down by the storm on Maui. By Saturday night, however, the lines were working again on all parts of the island except a small portion of Kula. Mr. Farley and his force deserve credit for their successful efforts in repairing the lines so quickly. The loss to the company by the storm is about $300.

The beach at the mouth of the Iao river is strewn for a considerable distance with ripe cane, washed down by the flood. Manager Wells estimates that the total damage to the plantation will not fall far short of $20,000.

The Kona has played havoc with the banana and papaya crops on Maui, but good will come out of evil if everyone will set at work to repair the damage, and not stop till every available spot is reset to these succulent visitors. At present, not one-half the needed supply is raised on the island, and it should be the duty of everyone to do his share in doubling the amount of these fruits raised.

As a piece of engineering skill, the laying of the pipe for the Wailuku water works was quite creditable, but it was a fatal blunder to lay it so exposed as it was to the action of Iao river. This was a mistake which it will cost thousands of dollars to rectify, and in replacing the pipe, it should be laid above high water mark, a point very near where it is to take the water from the stream. And if necessary to cross the river as the first crossing does now, the pipe should be imbedded in cement from high water line to high water line. That is the cheapest and only safe plan.

A GREAT MEDICINE.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. B. Piquet, of Pukuan, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux, and I can speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not the praise, of those who use it. The quick cure which it effects even in the most severe cases make it a favorite remedy where. For sale by all druggists and dealers. London, Smith & Co., Ltd. Agents H. T.

STORY OF THE BATTLE

How Woven Wire Bailey
Held the Fort.

HIS COHORTS FAILED HIM

Jack McVeigh's Attack on a Kuakini Street House and Its Success.

How Woven Wire Bailey held the fort against Jack McVeigh has not yet been told. Those who saw the now famous battle on Thursday last have spread the details of it over town, but no word of it has appeared in print.

Jack McVeigh is now a Federal quarantine officer and is a man not to be trifled with. Mrs. McVeigh last month rode by a house owned by her husband on Kuakini street which had been vacant for a long time. She was astonished to see it occupied by a native family. When she told her husband he shared her astonishment and said that he had not rented it to any one.

Mrs. McVeigh had been told by the occupant that J. F. Bailey, the bicycle man, had given it to them free of charge. McVeigh informed his lawyer, Lorrin Andrews, of the mysterious deal and the latter called on Bailey.

Bailey said it was all right, for he intended to buy the house from McVeigh and that the bargain was all made. When Andrews told McVeigh this the latter grew angry. He said he had never seen Bailey about it.

Bailey explained later that Real Estate Agent Savage had agreed to sell the house. Savage said that he knew no more about the matter than that Bailey had made him a proposition to buy the house. No terms had been agreed on and no permission given for occupancy. Savage said he didn't know anybody lived in the house.

Attorney Andrews says that when he told Bailey about this, Bailey agreed to withdraw. Andrews saw Bailey's attorney, T. McCants Stewart, and the latter laughed long and loud.

"Why," said Stewart, "the only way you can put out Bailey is by ejectment suit in the Circuit Court and as the calendar is crowded, it will take two years to have the suit brought or Bailey put out."

McVeigh thought this was a peculiar law, and Andrews advised him to put Bailey and his friends out by force. Andrews made an arrangement to take this step on Thursday at 11 o'clock, and meeting Stewart at the Police Court early in the day, told him of it.

"I warn you," said Stewart, "that if you attempt to put out those people today by force there will be murder done. They will repel force by force, and you take your life in your hand if you go." Andrews said that he was willing, and, with McVeigh and a native as interpreter, they went at the time fixed to the Kuakini street house. They found the portcullis down, the drawbridge up and a great padlock on the front gate. Grouped in the yard were Woven Wire Bailey, a white man and two natives. McVeigh demanded admission and Bailey denied it.

The latter instructed his cohorts to spread themselves about the premises and repel the invaders. Incidentally he asked that the attacking party await his lawyer's coming, but Bailey put his arms around the gate and dared them to come on.

They tried to break the lock and to force Bailey away. Finally McVeigh climbed on top of the fence to get into the yard and was shoved back by Bailey. Then the battle grew hot. McVeigh uttered some strong language and drew back his arm to hit Bailey. His lawyer and the others succeeding in holding him while Bailey shouted, "Why don't you hit me?" Meanwhile the gate was broken open and the invaders went in. The others had retreated to the piazza, while Bailey stayed in the yard. A truce was called and the natives, agreeing to leave the house by Thursday, they were suffered to remain until then.

Bailey was left in a heroic posture beside the ash barrel.
